About Seminar

Homo economicus is a person who desires to possess wealth and is capable of judging the comparative efficacy of means for obtaining that end. He is an ' economic man' who acts rationally on complete knowledge out of self interest and the desire for wealth. The economic upliftment of individual is not true parameter of his happiness hence, overall human development is necessary. This includes all the aspects of welfare and it is core of Applied Economics.

Thaler, Richard H (2000) opened the doors for an interesting academic discussion with his famous article " From Homo economicus to Homo sapiens". He concluded that Homo economicus would evolve into Homo sapiens. He also mentioned that behavioral models are harder than traditional models. Building models of rational, unemotional agents is easier than building models of quasi rational emotional humans. With this backdrop, inter-alia, one full chapter, "Policy for Homo sapiens, Not for Homo economicus: Leverages in Behavioral Economics of Nudge" has been dedicated in the latest Economic Survey 2018-19, Government of India. This great combination of human behaviour and nudge gave an insight for many schemes of Government and other State Government of India.

In this background, it is proposed to organize Two days National Seminar on " Economic and Business Policies for Transforming Homo economicus into Homo sapiens" by School of Studies in Economics, Jiwaji University, Gwalior.
