‘Dilemma of Growth and Inflation in Indian Economy’ is a crucial issue to be tackled by monetary authorities, government and policy makers. Economic survey’s projections of 5.5% growth rate of India in 2014-15 can be achieved only with increased productivity and removal of infrastructure bottlenecks. Fiscal incentives will be essential to encourage investment in infrastructure and manufacturing sector. The priorities of Finance Ministry and Reserve Bank of India are quite contradictory while the former is worried about increasing economic growth later is concerned about curtailing inflation. Reserve Bank has increased repo rate at least 13 times in last 21 in months and reduction only once but inflation is still high from the acceptable level. of about Simultaneously the growth rate in last 5 years has decreased from 9% to 5.3%. Decrease in GDP is mainly in manufacturing sector while growth rate in agriculture and services in more or less stagnant. There is immediate need to elaborately discuss these and other related issues and to suggest remedial measures so as to achieve twin objectives of increasing economic growth and controlling inflation in India.
